

Workplace Relations

Macpherson Kelley's national Workplace Relations team can help businesses increase performance and manage the risks associated with their most valuable asset; their people. Navigating the complexities of employment law can be challenging, even for the most experienced business owner or manager.

By working closely with our clients, we break down the legislation and provide clear, commercial advice that is in line with our clients' objectives and strategy. Due to the sensitivity and timeliness of workplace relations issues, we look to ensure there is always someone accessible for immediate advice.

With experienced personnel across each key area of employment law, we have the skills to provide considered, reliable advice on any specific workplace matter. We recognise that employers face a diverse range of challenges at each stage of the employment cycle.

In addition to investigations, IR, general employment law, employment-related migration and WorkCover services, we offer a number of preventative and early intervention strategies around safety, health and wellbeing in the workplace.

Our in-depth industry knowledge and commercial approach means we can minimise risk and help to improve productivity and, ultimately, our clients' bottom line.
